

Capacity Worldwide Consulting Group, LLC International Business Insurance

Many foreign manufacturing companies conducting business in the United States do not carry Products Liability coverage. If they do, the coverage often does not extend to products manufactured to be sold in the United States.

International business has unique risk management issues. Although some general liability policies may include "worldwide products liability coverage," this level of coverage may not be adequate to protect your business against product liability claims.

US Companies at Risk

Foreign manufacturers - particularly in China and other Asian countries - are increasing their impact on the US marketplace. Without proper coverage, US companies that depend on foreign suppliers are at great risk. In some cases, distribution companies face the added expense of having to be insured as if they are manufacturers in order to ensure coverage. If you do have proper worldwide products liability coverage, you may also reduce your company's product liability costs.
